Mrs. Sarah Ann Elliott.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Elliott, widow of James A. Elliott, of Prince Edward, died at her home, Mt. Hale, on Nov. 4th.

The death of Mrs. Elliott is the severest of another link between the Virginia of today and that of ante-bellum times. In disposition she was bright and cheerful, and she was exceedingly modest, unpretentious and refined. In her friendship she was very firm, and her unselfish, untiring devotion to her children was beautiful in its tenderness. She led an active life, and up to one week before her death, she was unusually well, but from the beginning of her illness she seemed to realize that the time was drawing near for her soul to take its flight, and as she came nearer to the end her gentle spirit of unassuming patience was a worthy example to those who watched her. On November 2nd she was paralyzed, and never spoke again, and before the morning light of Nov. 4th, she quietly passed away.

She was a member of the Presbyterian church, and as she advanced in age she grew in grace. On Saturday afternoon at four o'clock she was laid to rest, by the side of her husband, in the family burying ground. The service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. M. Elder. Mrs. Elliott leaves two children, Mrs. H. E. Wall and Mr. James Elliott, also four grand children, and one brother, Mr. James Smith.

Her home-going is a loss to us, but our Master said, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter."

You cannot cure piles by external application. Any remedy to be effective must be applied inside, right at the seat of the trouble. Man Zan is put in a collapsible tube, with a nozzle, so that it reaches inside and applies the remedy where it is most needed. Man Zan strengthens the blood vessels and nerves so that piles are impossible. Man Zan relieves the pain almost instantly, heals, soothes, cools and cures. Sold by Anderson Drug Co.

Our readers have had time to read the statements of our banks, which appeared in our last issue, and not only to read, but to study them. It must be gratifying to know that the conservative and yet the progressive spirit rules and reigns over that management. Confidence between man and man is of prime importance, but confidence between banks and patrons is essential. Surely no one can question the strength of Farmville banks, or the wisdom by which their affairs are guided. Prudence and push go hand in hand.

Woodbridge and Forbes Cases.

The November term of Prince Edward Circuit Court opened with more of interest than usual last Monday owing to the fact that E. C. Woodbridge and Charlie Forbes, the two Buckingham prisoners were to appear for trial, having been granted a change of venue from their county to this.

The prisoners were brought to Farmville Sunday night and kept in jail until court opened the next morning. The charge against them is burning the residence and several outhouses belonging to the late John Forbes, father of one of the prisoners, in Buckingham county one night last March.

Soon after being brought into court Monday, Mr. Flood, of counsel for Woodbridge moved for a continuance until the March term. Judge Hundley overruled this, stating that while he was disposed to do all he could for the accommodation and convenience of counsel on both sides, a sense of duty to the public demanded that these prisoners have as speedy trial as the law and justice would permit. In the meantime the prosecuting attorneys had announced their readiness to proceed with either the Woodbridge or Forbes case, and it had been decided between both sides that the former should be tried first.

After a whispered conversation between counsel the Commonwealth's side suggested that if the defense should ask for a continuance to a special term set for early in January no opposition would be raised and promptly Mr. Flood agreed to this. Mr. Strode, of the prosecution, requested the clerk to have the record show that the continuance was given upon the motion of the defense, and after some minor details the Court set Monday, January 2nd, for the commencement of the trial of Woodbridge.

Judge Crute thought that an injustice had been done the court in some of the recent newspaper correspondence, which had made it appear that Judge Hundley had arbitrarily and without the request or consent of the prisoners, removed these cases to Prince Edward. He stated to the court that he had intended correcting this through the Times-Dispatch, but had neglected doing so, hence he would make the statement publicly that it was with the knowledge and consent of his client that the change of venue was granted.

Mr. Flood said that owing to the fact that such an impression had been made on the public mind, he would say that before asking for a change of venue he had consulted his client (Woodbridge), and that it was at that time the prisoner's expressed wish that his case be removed from Buckingham. To all Mr. Flood had to say with reference to the change of venue Woodbridge continually nodded assent.

Both prisoners looked remarkably well considering their long confinement, and especially was this true of Forbes, despite the fever from which he suffered during the past summer. Woodbridge was accompanied in the courthouse by his two pretty daughters, both grown, and they only left him when the sheriff had to take the prisoners to jail for the recess hour.

Just before the prisoners were taken back to jail, somewhat of a sensation was sprung when Judge Hundley announced that it had been reported to him that the county jail of Prince Edward was in a terrible sanitary condition, and that he wanted the jailer brought before him for the purpose of an explanation. Sheriff Dickinson arose and said that he would have Jailer Matthews come before his Honor, whereupon Judge Hundley replied: "You are the jailer by law." Matthews, the acting jailer, however, came immediately before the Court, but before he could attempt an explanation of the jail conditions Judge Hundley said he would thoroughly investigate the matter, and appointed a commission to examine the prison. The report of the commission, which was composed of Mr. Flood, Col. Hubbard and Mr. J. L. Hart, indicated the condition of the quarters for prisoners to be very unsanitary, ill-smelling and infested with vermin. The beddings and floors were reported as filthy in the extreme and the place unfit for the habitation of human beings.

The matter was brought to the attention of the court on an application of the attorneys for Forbes and Woodbridge, who are confined there on the charge of arson, for removal to another jail on account of the bad condition of the jail. The statement of the counsel caused Judge Hundley to immediately appoint the commission named. He ordered that the inspection be made forthwith and his instructions were carried out.

Judge Hundley also stated from the bench that complaint had come to him that the prisoners in this jail were neither properly nor well fed; and that he would look into this, as the Commonwealth paid amply for the feeding of her prisoners.

The Court issued a rule against the Board of Supervisors, and said that he would resort to any extreme to have the remedy applied to the outrageous conditions prevailing at the jail.

Commonwealth's Attorney Watkins stated to the Court that the Board of Supervisors had done everything they could to put this jail in a sanitary condition, and that for the vermin it was due to the character of the prisoner.

Judge Hundley remarked that the complaints of Prince Edward's jail were the only ones he had ever had of any other prison on his circuit, and that he would investigate the charges in order to ascertain, if possible, who is to blame, and that he would in the meantime have Woodbridge and Forbes taken back to the Buckingham jail to be kept until the day of their trial in January.

The Buckingham officers returned Monday afternoon with their two prisoners.

All the lawyers in the two cases were present in court Monday except Mr. J. L. Lee, who is of counsel for Forbes, who was represented by Mr. Lee's associate, Mr. Howard. Col. Hubbard, the prosecuting attorney of Buckingham, was at hand, looking himself again after a rather serious operation recently made upon him in Richmond.

Shot His Little Brother.

While playing with a 32 calibre pistol at the dinner table last Monday, Howard Skinner, a fifteen-year-old boy, shot and seriously wounded his little brother, who is not over six or seven years old. Howard claims that he did not think the pistol was loaded when he pulled the trigger. The boys were sitting not over two feet apart when the pistol went off as the powder burst indicated. The ball entered just below the right eye and lodged in the cheek bone, which has not been extracted. Yesterday the little fellow was doing as well as could be expected.

Hunting and Fishing in the South.

Each year the Southern Railway has gotten up a handsome little booklet entitled "Hunting and Fishing in the South," and this year have gone to a great deal of trouble and expense in making it the most complete booklet of its kind issued, having full information concerning the kind of game to be found in each section, and the game laws in the various Southern States. The cover design too is very beautiful, and altogether the book is a work of art, well worth the four cents in stamps, on receipt of which any District or Division Passenger Agent of the Company will be glad to mail you one.

The New Normal Faculty.

This self constituted and suddenly improved body met in august assemblage in the assembly hall of the school on Wednesday evening to the genuine delight of students and gathered guests. It must be interesting to see one's self reproduced faithfully in the poses, the words and actions of another. This was done in faultless and charming manner.

"To see our selves as others see us" is an unusual and uncommon luxury. The gifted Mary Anderson was never more accurate in her splendid work than were these 1904 character personators. The members of the every-day faculty, now that their every day movements have been photographed and presented to an expectant public will look more carefully to their P's and Q's.

Death of Mr. Guerrant.

News reached here last Tuesday afternoon of the death at Christiansburg of John G. Guerrant, which occurred that day after a short illness. Mr. Guerrant was 30 years of age, and had practiced law for about four years at Christiansburg. He was exceedingly popular at his home and abroad, a man of indefinable integrity, coupled with a generous nature, he had won the affection of all with whom he had to do.

He was buried Wednesday afternoon, the anniversary of his marriage, having six years ago married Miss Ellen Armistead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Armistead, of Farmville. Mrs. Guerrant and one son survive.

Caught on the Wing.

Editor Herald:—The happiest man I have met with in extensive goings to and fro was a farmer whose crop had all been housed and those intended for market had been sold at satisfactory prices. He was healthy of body and so were his wife and children. He was at peace with his neighbors, "feared God and kept his commandments."

It was a pleasure to chat with him in front of his open fire place and to share with him the luxuries of his own table. Mr. Roosevelt may be the subject of envy, but in my opinion this man is a much more worthy subject if there is anything worthy about the "green-eyed monster."

One of the most interesting objects I have come across was a girl of 18 summers writing a love letter. She was all unconscious of the fact that I had caught on to what she was doing, but I had and it was an interesting study. Maybe you never watched performance just like. If not let me advise you not to miss the next opportunity that presents itself. Her smiles and frowns came and went, her face flushed and then became pale, she whispered in low tones to herself and then wrote away in perfect silence and when she had signed "darling" or "dearie" or "duckie," she wrote a postscript not that I was permitted to read it but that I did follow the movements of the pen and knew just what was going on.

I have been spending some weeks with the Atlantic in touch of me on one side and the Chesapeake just as near on the other side, and staying in the home of an oysterman, and yet I haven't tasted, touched or handled one of the toothsome bivalves nor any other thing that comes from the water. It was so when I spent some time in Tazewell, the home of premium beef, and yet I rarely saw a decent roast or a tender steak. The same old story.

the shoemaker's family shooses. Not so in Southside Virginia for whatever of good grows there the people who live there are sure to get full share. The first clippings of turnip salad in the spring, they are sure to eat, and the first fryers, the costliest lambs and the shapeliest joles, the freshest eggs and the cream of the milk. But then, there are no other people just like those of Southside Virginia. A few days ago I stopped for dinner at a country home in the lower end of Northampton county, and the owner turned out to be an ex-conductor of the Norfolk & Western, who for a number of years ran between Roanoke and Crewe. When he found out that I was from Farmville he got to be very congenial. I asked him how he had learned anything about farming on a freight train, and in reply he told me of his experience on a through for seven years, and evidently he has learned the art somewhere. Last season he had 80 acres in cultivation, devoted to corn, Irish and sweet potatoes, and sold $7,000 worth of what was grown there. That's good farming for a man who was trained on a car. In addition to what was sold from the farm he made an abundance for man and beast for the whole year. That man is more independent than is Mr. Roosevelt.

Our friend, W. H. Richardson, will have to look well to his laurels. I visited on yesterday the Virginia home of Jno. S. Wise, which is located on the tip end of Northampton, and just where Ocean and Bay meet in spot and crest. It is a most romantic spot and ideal as country resting place. The home is located on a bluff from which an untracing view is had of a magnificent outstretch of water-sailing, oystering, gunning, bathing, &c., invite their respective devotees and all nature, above and around, offer continuing panorama of passing beauty. Costly buildings with all modern conveniences have been erected on the place, the lands are very productive and yet the owner lives in New York, and the houses are tenanted.

An old colored man was digging potatoes from one of the fields as I drove in sight, and with something of the air of a Chesterfield told me of the glories of the place, emphasizing the fact that he "was born there and knew every inch of it." It was the unique name of "Kip to Peek." Where it came from, or what its meaning I refer you to erratic John for information.

Say to your lady readers that I am staying in a home over which presides one of the busiest and yet happiest women I have met with. She rises before the larks, makes all the fires and by seven has a warm and attractive breakfast on the table. Yesterday morning her only boy at home was too sick to leave his bed, and when I came down to the dining room at the usual hour I found that in addition to her accustomed duties she had fed 4 horses, a dozen pigs, 2 cows, and a yard full of turkeys, geese, &c., and yet at breakfast she was as cheerful as a bird in spring time, and said nothing of life's burdens. The "servant girl" problem is not a vexed one in that household.

Northampton is nominally a "dry county" with the exception of Cape Charles and yet the grand jury now in session is examining 107 witnesses, with no telling where the investigation as to the unlawful sale of whiskey will go. It does look as though the Government must control the making, as no human power seems strong enough to control the drinking.

It would be interesting to know how much money is spent day by day in target practicing at Fortress Monroe. I am 30 miles distant and hour after hour my attention is attracted to the deep-muttered roar of the big guns. More battleships, deadlier armies, longer range stronger armies and all, they tell us, in the interest of peace. Strange that the gentle Angel should be wooed by the frowning monster.

Bird hunting as you know it in Prince Edward is not very inviting on the Eastern Shore, but duck hunting is a "daisy." Put on the waist-laid green boots, get into the canoe, pull out into the swamp, place your decoys and wait in the blind. The feet all most freeze, the body trembles with cold, but in due time the "foolish bird" flies, or swims over the danger line, and death ensues. Then the gunner warms up and excitement runs high. A pair of canvas backs on the table make an inviting picture, and the fun that follows I need not describe. The fact is you can't put into words the flavor or the fairness of a rose.

Dalby is a familiar name with you and your readers, but I passed through a town with that name recently without recognizing the name, as it was pronounced Dalby. I talked with the citizen after whom the town was named and he insisted that Dalby was the correct pronunciation. I still think he is in error.

Dr. G. M. Vaden, who when his honored father ministered to the Methodist flock of Farmville, was in knee pants, and a pupil at the Normal, is now leading physician of the portion of Northampton from which I am now writing, and is held in high esteem by all who know him.

Darlington Heights Dots.

Darlington Heights, Va., Nov. 23, 1904.

Messrs. T. E. Burnside and Emmett Hempstead, of Ohio, have been welcome guests at Mr. Thea Carter's for several days. The woods resounded to the barking of dogs and the shooting of guns during their stay. From what they brought in one would judge them to be good shots. They pleased all who had the pleasure of meeting them. They seemed to enjoy Prince Edward hospitality but have left it to try that of Buckingham.

Miss Maudie Carter and father were in Farmville Tuesday last.
